

FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has improved my time at home by not disturbing me with unwanted calls. I work late nights so prefer to sleep in morning and not get disturbed by unwanted and unsolicited calls from credit card companies and people who conduct survey, I am not really nterested in all this, if I hook up my phone I might miss other important calls.

Indiana's law has been very effective over last year (e.g., "I used to receive 10 calls per week, now I receive one per 2 weeks"). Its really effective and I appreciated it. I would prefer that it remains the same.
